WHAT IS SUBLIMATION PRINTING?

Sublimation Printing makes it very easy to produce high quality and hard-wearing promotional items, giftware and garments in a cost-effective way.

The process uses an inkjet printer and sublimation ink to create transfer prints. These prints are then applied using heat and pressure to specially coated blanks (i.e., mugs slates and coasters etc) or polyester fabric.

During the process, the sublimation ink transforms into a gas, which then permanently dyes the product it is applied to. This creates prints of incredible detail and colour vibrancy that will not wash out even when using harsh cleaning methods such as a dishwasher/washing machine.

When you take both the quality of the result and the very low cost per print, sublimation really is the perfect way to either expand your existing personalisation business or start a new venture.

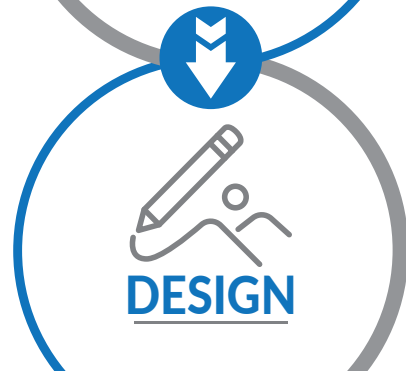

Sublimation setup costs are affordable to a wide range of budgets and the process is very easy to scale up to quickly meet growing demand.

5 STEPS OF SUBLIMATION

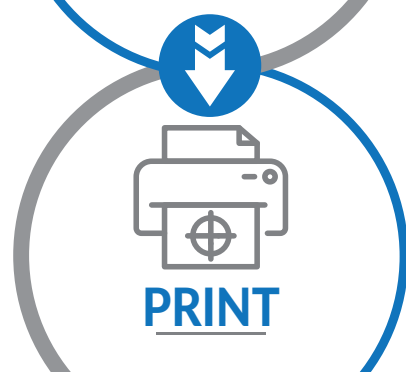

STEP 1

The first step is inspiration, having a clear idea of the products that you want to create is probably the most important step in the process and will make the rest of your sublimation journey much easier

STEP 2

Once you have your idea, create your design, it is recommended that you use a good quality image editing software that allows for colour management. High quality unique designs make for the most successful products.

STEP 3

The design needs to be printed onto sublimation transfer paper with an inkjet printer loaded with sublimation ink. This ink is specially designed to transfer onto the sublimation blank with the application of heat and pressure. It is best to use a high quality sublimation ink and transfer paper for best results.

STEP 4

The printed transfer is then fixed to the sublimation blank using heat tape. The blank and the print are then placed into a heat press or an oven. The heat and pressure transform the ink into a gas which then permanently dyes the sublimation coating on the blank. Providing a vivid, high quality and highly durable finished product.

STEP 5

Your finished product is ready to go to market. Take some nice photographs and get it out there!

SUBLIMATION CONVECTION OVEN

Using an oven to sublimate products can provide a real boost in both productivity and quality of results. The even heating of the blank allows effects such as edge to edge printing on mugs to be achieved. It also allows the pressing of unusually shaped objects or objects that are too big for a conventional press.

The oven also has the capacity to run 16 11oz mugs simultaneously which provides a huge boost in output when compared to a conventional mug press. Find out more by visiting our website: www.dyesublimationsupplies.co.uk
